Tokyo Asset Management Forum

Fast-tracking Tokyo's development as a global financial city by enhancing investment chains

An inflection point has been reached in the Japanese economy. This inflection point, especially evident in Japan's monetary and economic policies, is shaping a new reality for Tokyo as an international financial city.

During a speech in New York in September, Prime Minister Fumio Kishida announced Japan's ambition to become a global leader in asset management. FinCity.Tokyo has directed its efforts toward enhancing Tokyo's appeal as a financial market, striving to establish it as a world-class global financial city. A pivotal element of this initiative lies in increasing the sophistication of asset management. The forum will offer an opportunity to revisit and extensively discuss this crucial theme, exploring the significance of the global financial city concept.

This year, the forum will coincide with the "Tokyo Asset Management Forum," an event aimed at revitalizing the asset management industry, and stimulating the growth of emerging management businesses. The objective for the day is to foster in-depth discussions in the field of asset management, primarily involving financial service providers.
