What is SPAC?

Shizuoka Performing Arts Center (SPAC) was founded in 1995 by the Shizuoka prefectural government and commenced its full-fledged activities in 1997 under the direction of SUZUKI Tadashi, its first General Artistic Director. As a pioneer of publicly funded performing-arts organizations in Japan, SPAC retains its own staff of actors, technical and production staff, who are based at its own venues and facilities. The mission of SPAC is not only to create original pieces, but also to invite progressive artistic companies and creators to Shizuoka and to develop human resources seeking expression through the performing arts. Since April 2007, when he was appointed as the General Artistic Director, Satoshi Miyagi has led SPAC in a buoyant new phase of development and expansion.

In 2014, MIYAGI and SPAC were invited to the Festival d'Avignon, where he received excellent reviews for his open-air version of the Hindu epic "Mahabharata" staged in La Carrière de Bourbon. Following that landmark achievement, the festival extended the honor of inviting MIYAGI to present a Buddhist interpretation he created of the ancient Greek mythological tragedy "Antigone" as its super-prestigious opening program for 2017. On that occasion, which was the first time an Asian play had ever been selected to launch the festival, MIYAGI's exalted "stage" was the open-air Cour d'honneur du Palais des papes (the Honor Court of the Palace of Popes). By the play's end, those towering medieval stone walls were ringing out with long and splendid standing ovations welcoming the work's director and creator along with SPAC's actors and staff — while more than 60 European media all gave great reviews. In 2019, SPAC presented "Antigone" at Park Avenue Armory in NY, USA.
